"The Fifth Judicial district has perpentrated through the ballot-box a flagrant and inexcusable outrage—no less than rejecting with contumely a judge who has declared the law to be what if is—rejecting him for the reason that he has so declared it. It is not necessary, in order to characterize this proceeding, to recount that Judge Lawrence is the foremost Jurist of the State and one of the foremost in the nation; that in the devision for which he has been ousted all the members of the Supreme Court concurred with him; that ousting Judge Lawrence will not make the law different from what it is, and that ousting all the other judges will not make the different. These things scarcely aggravate the offence. Rejecting a judge because he is honest, sourageous, and uncompromising as to the claims of truth, is a practice which needs only to be generally adopted in the United States in order to plunge the people into the boiling water of anarchy, to escape thence to the more tolerable climate of despotism, as France has done three or four times within two generations."
